

Modern Litho Deemed An “Essential Business”

To Whom It May Concern:

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security has declared the United States Postal Service (USPS) an essential government service. Printing and mailing service providers, like Modern Litho, are critical infrastructure manufacturers responsible for creating and distributing printed material into the mail stream. These specific services include: printing, mailing and mail management services, warehousing, as well as support of the healthcare and medical industries, nonprofits and social services organizations in the form of regulatory and business communications. Modern Litho – Jefferson City houses a full-time USPS employee who ensures efficient and accurate dissemination of these materials into the mail stream. For more information: <https://piamidam.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/03/USPS-essential-letter.pdf>

Modern Litho will remain open for business and continue production at all facilities in Jefferson City, Kansas City, and St. Louis in order to serve the needs of our customers under the state and federal essential manufacturer guidelines. We continue to be diligent as an organization in adhering to the best practices for personal hygiene and social distancing at the workplace put forth by the CDC, WHO, OSHA and the State of Missouri. Our intention is to operate unless or until it becomes unsafe to do so. At this point, we are committed to protecting the health of our employees, their livelihood, and serving our customers well. For the latest updates: modernlitho.com/covid-19

We are here to answer questions, create solutions and offer support in any way that we can throughout this difficult time. Our team will be reaching out to our customers, vendors and industry partners in a spirit of service, support and collaboration. If you have any questions please don't hesitate to contact to your Account Executive. We are here and we are ready.

Sincerely,
The Modern Litho Team